An ugly story about General Butler is told by the Boston Herald as coming from a well known Republican Senator of a New England State, who related it to one of Butler's friends several years ago, and has been waitfor an explanation ever since. In brief Walter Russell, charged with stealing, and it is this: When the war broke out a north-Thomas Fitzpatrick, charged with receiving, 5,000 bricks belonging to the city of Richmond, were continued till Tuesday.

The Common Potter and Abolitionist and a Christian, was living in New Orleans. He was arrested and put in prison, and his property was seized by the Confederate Government. His inoffensive and gentle manners had made him many friends, and some of these brought about an agreement by which he was to be allowed to escape from prison on the payment of a sum of money. The sum was raised, and he was permitted to escape, and was cared for by his friends in hiding-places in the city. When the Union army captured the city and Baroline Richings Bernard's English-Opera
